Jewelry

GLASS REMEMBRANCE

Cremation jewelry by Glass Remembrance are called “Sweet Memories” and come in several unique styles and colors. Each piece is custom made to order by glass artists who create a work of art that contains a small portion of the actual cremains of your beloved pet.

GLASS MEMORIALS

All memorial keepsakes are hand blown and sculpted in the U.S. by artists. Molten glass is at temperatures over 2000°F which is a higher temperature than most cremation processes. When the glass is molten, the cremains are carefully incorporated into the glass. Since glass is at a higher temperature than the cremains, the carbon is burned off and the cremains turn a brilliant white color in the glass.

FOREVER IN MY HEART

This fill-in memory book is a gentle guide for looking back at a pet's life from the joyful beginning to the sad farewell. Space is provided for photos or drawings, recording memories and celebrating the many ways a particular animal was so special. For adults and children alike, the completed books become treasuries of remembrances to live on in the heart.

GOODBYE MY FRIEND

Offers consolation at the time of death and provides comfort throughout the grieving process. Feelings common to loss are explored: denial, sadness, anger, and guilt. Pet owners are assured that their intense feelings are normal and that they have a need and a right to grieve. Practical suggestions are offered in finding outlets for grief, helping children with death and selecting a memorial. A dedication page makes it ideal to give to anyone who has lost an animal friend.

Pet End of Life Support

Assessing Quality of Life

Your pet has been a member of your family and has provided love and comfort to you. As a pet parent, there may come a time when it is necessary to assess their comfort level. Along with guidance from your veterinarian, ask yourself the following questions to help determine if your pet is still living a good quality life.

GENERAL APPEARANCE

DOES HE/SHE:

- Seem happy (tail wagging, enjoy petting, etc)?
- Groom themselves?
- Have difficulty breathing or excessive panting?

INTERACTION

DOES HE/SHE:

- Spend time with the family?
- Isolate themselves?
- Enjoy playing?

BEHAVIOR

DOES HE/SHE:

- Exhibit anxiety?
- Display behavioral problems that limit lifestyle?

DIET

DOES HE/SHE:

- Eat normally?
- Drink normally?
- Have difficulties maintaining normal weight?

ELIMINATION

DOES HE/SHE:

- Urinate normally and have regular bowel movements?
- Have inappropriate eliminates unresponsive to medical or adaptation efforts.

PAIN

DOES HE/SHE:

- Have trouble jumping, running, or moving?
- Whimper or cry when getting up, or when you pet them?
- Have troubles standing?

Answering these questions may not be easy to do. If you have made the determination that your pet's quality of life is poor, humane euthanasia may be the kindest thing you can do for your pet. Euthanasia is often accompanied by feelings of confusion, guilt, anger, and sadness. These feelings are part of the normal grieving process. Consulting with family, friends, or your veterinarian will help you emotionally accept your decision. In the end, humane euthanasia may be the best decision you can make for your beloved pet.

ASSESSING QUALITY OF LIFE

This document is designed to help determine if euthanasia is the best choice for your pet. It asks many dietary, activity, and behavioral questions that may aid you in the difficult decision to euthanize.

Preparing for Your Pet's Euthanasia

IMPORTANT CONSIDERATIONS

Do I want to be present when my pet is euthanized?

When it comes to euthanasia, there is no "one way" or "right way" of doing it. Each person has his or her own opinions and feelings about whether he or she can bear to be present. Some people feel bad if they are not with their pet bringing comfort in its last moments. Other people cannot bear to see their pet die and prefer to have their last memories of their pet as a living, breathing animal. It is not wrong of you to elect not to be present for the euthanasia.

Should I bring my child and what should I tell them?

Pets are often a significant element in the life of a child and often form closer bonds with the children of the family than they do the adults. The decision to bring children to the euthanasia depends on the age and the emotional maturity of the child. You will need to carefully consider whether your child can handle being present.

Consider the following questions:

- How will my child feel if they aren't given the option?
- Should I allow my child to decide if they want to be present?
- What are the consequences of allowing my child to be present?

If the children do attend the euthanasia, it is recommended that you bring someone with you who can take the children outside if the emotion becomes overwhelming. You, the parent, are often emotional enough, trying to say goodbye to your pet, without having the added distress of soothing your children. Keep in mind, distressed children may also distress your pet.

An alternative to having the children present for the euthanasia itself is to bring them to the clinic, have them say their goodbyes to their pet and then have them leave the room for the actual procedure. Once the pet has passed away, the children can then be brought back into the room to say their goodbyes and come to terms with the reality of the situation. This may give the children closure. If your child will not be present for the euthanasia, consider allowing them the opportunity to say goodbye at home.

Another useful way of providing children with closure is for them to assist with a small funeral for their pet. If local ordinances allow and you choose to bury the pet at home, let them help if they wish and let them say a few words in tribute to the pet and put some flowers on the grave. If you are having the pet cremated, you can hold a small memorial service in a special place.

PREPARING FOR YOUR PET'S EUTHANASIA

This document is designed to prepare you for the day of the euthanasia. It addresses scenarios such as who should be present for the procedure, what to tell children, and what to do with the pet after the procedure.

Euthanasia

The euthanasia process involves your pet being administered a solution that helps the animal peacefully fall asleep and pass without experiencing pain.

WHAT TO EXPECT THE DAY OF EUTHANASIA

1. Scheduling the appointment

When scheduling, request a specific time when the clinic is at its quietest or has few appointments booked. This way, time can be dedicated to you and your pet. This also gives you more privacy with fewer people around during your time of grief.

2. Fill out the paperwork

The law states that owners must give written, signed consent for any euthanasia procedure performed on a pet. There may be additional paperwork should you choose cremation. Making the decision prior to the procedure is highly recommended so you can think about your options. For example, choosing to get your pet's ashes back in a special urn. Ask your veterinary clinic to see your urn options.

3. If possible, you'll be taken to a quiet place to wait for the veterinarian

If the clinic only has one waiting room, you may have to wait with other clients prior to your appointment. However, if the clinic has consult rooms or even a 'grieving room' specifically designed for this, you will most likely be taken to wait in privacy for the veterinarian.

4. The Procedure

In a veterinary clinic, pets are euthanized through the use of an IV solution. An IV catheter and/or sedatives may be used. Occasionally, your veterinarian will not be able to inject the drug into one of the animal's leg veins. There are many reasons this may occur such as: the animal is in shock that the leg veins are collapsed and too small to access, the animal is too aggressive to permit the veterinarian safe access to a vein, or the animal is far too small for a vein to be entered. In these cases, the euthanasia solution will be administered into the animal's heart or abdomen.

Bereavement Support

Often, our pets are much more than just pets - they are family, friends, sidekicks, and teammates. Experiencing the loss of a pet is a very personal and individual thing. It can be surprisingly more challenging and painful than we expect.

Grieving the loss of a pet can occur on a physical, emotional, behavioral, cognitive, and spiritual level. It can be exhausting. Our hearts feel broken, our minds alternate from confusion to guilt. We spend a lot of time asking "could I have done something better or different?" These feelings are all normal.

Depending on your comfort level, there are many ways to express your feelings. Some ideas are to:

- Write about your loss in a journal.
- Write a private letter to the pet you lost.
- Create a memorial in a frame (or via your personal social media page.) These memorials can include pictures or videos of your pet, your pet's identification tags, and/or an urn containing your pet's ashes if you opted to have the ashes returned to you.
- Use a portion of their ashes to be made into a pendant or jewelry.
- Plant a tree in honor of your pet.
- Make a donation to or volunteer your time at a local organization of your choice.

While friends and family members can offer support, they may not understand the sensitivity of your grief and can unintentionally react in a way that leaves you feeling hurt. There are other ways to acquire the support and comfort you may need at this time. Many seek comfort through local animal grievance support groups or through a pet loss support hotline like those listed on the back of this pamphlet. It is healthy and even encouraged to talk about the life you shared with your pet as this is an important part of your healing process.
